

WOODSTOCK, VIRGINIA.

FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1903.

THE LEGISLATURE is now hurrying through its work and seems to be anxious to adjourn. Whether it is the dangerous condition of the Capitol or the expected approach of very warm weather that causes this desire is not known. Even evils may sometimes bring good results.

We hope that the Legislature of Virginia will not insist upon placing the statue of Gen. Lee in the memorial hall in Washington so long as there is a single Grand Army Post that, actuated by the ignorance and malignant hatred of its members, objects to it. These bodies even speak of Lee, the traitor to his country. Gen. Lee was true to his State. He was in favor of preserving the constitution of the United States and opposed its violation. Lincoln was true to his State, but did not hesitate to trample under foot the constitution of his country, under the shallow pretext of military necessity.

Not one of us will be added to the fame of Gen. Lee by placing his statue in memorial hall. It would only add to the fame of those already there by their proximity to the statue of the grandest soldier, and of one of the most revered Christian gentlemen of modern times.

THE reception of Mr. Cleveland at St. Louis is indicative of his great popularity in the democratic party. To day a considerable element is in favor of his nomination. While Mr. Cleveland would probably make a better president than any one who is likely to be nominated, it would be unwise to press his nomination. Too many politicians are opposed to him. They do not appreciate the high statesmanship of Mr. Cleveland. The abuse which Mr. Bryan has been proper to heap upon Mr. Cleveland has had an effect which Mr. Bryan hardly expected. It has not only increased Cleveland's popularity, but it has reacted upon Bryan. Mr. Cleveland can well afford to rest upon his record as a statesman and a President of the United States. The fact that after two terms, many of the best democrats of the country are willing to waive their opposition to a third term and advocate his reelection is evidence that Mr. Cleveland has won the admiration and support of that class of people who are anxious to place in the presidential chair the man most deserving of the high honor.

THE Goodson Gazette in an editorial defending Gen. Lee from the aspersions of some Northern paper, says: "Grant was a magnanimous victor, and no Southern man has aught to say against him. We have no bitter memories of anyone who fought us according to the rules of civilized warfare."

We have no disposition to stir up the bitter memories of the war, but we most earnestly protest against Grant's methods being termed, "according to the rules of civilized warfare." We would refer the Gazette to the accounts of the sufferings and deaths of thousands of brave men in the horrible prisons, both North and South for which Gen. Grant was responsible, also to his order in reference to Mosely's men and his order to desolate the Shenandoah Valley with the burning torch. The methods of civilized warfare certainly do not justify a war upon the homes of defenseless women and children.

Gen. Grant, at the surrender of Gen. Lee, acted as an honorable soldier would be expected to act. When he stood as a stonewall between the fiery wrath of the home guards and the non combatants of the North against the men who had honorably surrendered which threatened to override the terms of the capitulation, he exhibited more of the qualities of a soldier than he had when he commanded an army of two hundred thousand men. We care not what the G. A. R. or vindictive editors of the North may say about Gen. Lee. Their poisoned shafts are as harmless as if they were cast at the sun at noon day, but we do protest against Southern editors misleading the rising generation as to the kind of warfare which Gen. Grant waged against their fathers.

WEST POINT FIRE-SWEEP.

West Point, Va., May 1.—Fire broke out in the heart of the business section of this town shortly after midnight this morning and proved the most disastrous blaze in the history of West Point. Four entire squares, comprising nearly all the business section of the town, were swept away.

Fifty-two business houses and residences were destroyed and 30 or more families were left homeless. Several hundred persons had nowhere to sleep tonight.

The sleeping town was awakened by the glare of the flames, and the residents fought the blaze with great determination, but were unable to check the fire. Frame structures went like chaff before the wind, and houses were all ablaze a few moments after they had caught.

At 2 o'clock the whole town seemed destined to destruction, and Richmond was telegraphed for aid. It took some time to get started, and dawn was breaking when the Richmond firemen reached the little town at the head of York river.

The Richmond engine proved useless, for it could not use salt water, and a supply of fresh water was not available. But the conflagration was about over. The last house on the fourth block was tottering. It fell and the fire had burned itself out, apparently exhausted by the effort that had had four squares in ashes.

The total loss is estimated at about $150,000 and the insurance is hardly a fourth of this amount. There is hardly a leading business establishment left in the town and the people are in deep distress over the outlook. Many have lost their business and all their savings.

AROUSAL BY FLAMES.

MOUNTAIN CONFLAGRATION WIPES OUT A HOME IN ITS PATHWAY.

Winchester, May 3.—The most terrific mountain conflagration that has ever visited this section of the county swept over an area of ten long and about four miles wide Thursday, and wiped out entirely the home of a man named George, which was directly in the path of the devouring element. The fire was started it is thought, by carelessness or with criminal intent by some malicious person, and commenced near Star Tannery.

The people of the neighborhood fought back the fire, and on Thursday night Mr. George retired after a day's battle with the flames. He believed that his home was saved, but during the night the rising wind fanned some small embers into a fierce fire, and early Friday morning George was aroused by the burning of the barn on the place. The house was also on fire and the family barely escaped with their lives. Everything was lost, including $17 in money. The fire swept on and was not stopped until it reached a point near a wheat field. In its course thousands of rails, fences and timber were destroyed, and the money loss will be high.

LABOR IS HIS SALVATION.

POSSIBILITY OF NEGRO ADVANCEMENT NOT FOUND IN CLAMORING FOR SOCIAL EQUALITY

The negro's salvation is to come from work. Northern adventurers wronged him equally with his white neighbor when they turned his attention to social equality and political right, when his first proper task was to make himself a useful and necessary part of the community in which he lived. Industrially, the negro has found the South more friendly than the North. The Scotchman is glad to see him in almost any useful employment, where the North allows him to do little except carry dishes and shine boots. We shall do well to bother ourselves very little about the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments and contribute what we can afford of our superior wealth to the educational facilities of the poorer South. We are beginning to understand, also, that the education which teaches a negro to make boots is better than the education which tells him what is the capital of Switzerland or who was the author of "Marmion." Nothing is more upsetting, more shallow and deleterious, than "accomplishments"—mental acquisition which rests on no solid foundation of usefulness and necessity. I am fair to admit that in the direction of sound progress among the negroes, and consequently among the whites, the South has been distressed and held back by the mistaken interference of the North, not only in such gross cases as the carpet-baggers, the reconstruction doings of 1868 and the long years of "bloody shirt," but also by the uncomprehending censure of which she is still the victim. An attitude like that taken by Mr. Cleveland is as friendly and as helpful to the negro as to the white. He wisely waded away remote consequences, which are all guesswork and futile, and speaks only of the things which we can see. However the negro may stand in the scale of humanity when he has made for himself this necessary foundation of skill and thrift, it is to his honor already that the man who taught Mr. Cleveland his doctrine, who has educated us all, North and South, to see clearly in the fog of passion and new conditions, is himself a negro. The greatest teacher to-day alive in America is Booker Washington.—Collier's Weekly.

The time is rapidly drawing near, if newspaper reports are reliable, when the South will be forced to invade the North to protect the negro from mob violence. Indiana and Illinois seem to be doing their best to hasten the day, too.—Atlanta Journal.

Mr. J. D. Singhas had a house, barn and other out buildings burned to the ground. The house was occupied by Mr. Ben. George, who lost all of his house property and farming implements and several other houses were in danger. Mr. Singhas loss was about $800 or $1,000 with no insurance and the loss for other people will reach thousands of dollars. Every man was called from far and near to help to fight the flames, which were carried by a high wind which continued until Friday evening. Many people moved their property out of their houses to save it from being burned. The fire was about all out Saturday evening, and the men said they were glad of it, for several of them are suffering from the smoke. The fire was supposed to be caused by an incendiary.
